While I appreciate the generous concurat literature favorable to my canvasses, cannot convince myself that it is advisable for any national organization to undertake to work up or to crystallize sentiment in my behalf. "Your league has my cordial approval

In all probability the thing that provoked this mild rebuke was the recent announcement made in New York that, so much progress had marked this organization's work in Mr. Bryan's behalf, next year's program could now be outlined. Then followed the prediction that ex-Gov. Francis of Missouri would preside over the democratic national convention, Augustus Thomas, the playwright, would put Mr. Bryan in nomination, and "Big Tim" Sullivan would manage the campaign. This led to considerable discussion, in which The Star joined. not favorable to so outlandish an arrange-

Mr. Bryan takes the right view of the situation. His case is with the rank and file of his party. They know him and what he represents, and if they want him to lead the party again they will say so in good time and in their own way. It is neither necessary nor advisable therefore for politicians with axes to grind to be putting themselves forward as custodians spicuous in his name

Mr. Bryan is sensitive about some things. He will not wear leading strings. He forms his own opinions, and picks his own cronies. He is his own man. You may differ with him about policies, and wonder a little about some of his friends, but that he is a sincere man with a high sense of character and dignity admits of no doubt. For this reason any talk topped off with the suggestion of such a politician as "Big Tim" Sullivan for the place of Bryan manager next year leads to doubt as to its authority "Big Tim" will have his uses in the campaign, and Mr. Bryan will appreciate his services, but his place will not be at Mr. Bryan's elbow, nor will he be charged with important national duties.

Mr. Bryan, as we may see, is, just now, looking to the people and not to the politicians for credentials. If he wins at the polls next year will the people outclass the politicians in influence at the White House?

Ware Thieves!

Numerous thefts from the person are be ing reported to the police of this city, indicating that artful dodgers are at work on the cars and in crowds to relieve the unwary of their possessions. It may be that these pocket thieves are moving north or south, to or from Jamestown, or are merely assembled here to ply their trade visiting the capital by the hundreds daily. At all events, there is evidently a wave of to be careful about their cash and watches and other valuables when they fare forth into the streets or ride on the cars. It is comparatively easy to safeguard the pockets. The surest way to do so is to have nothing of value in them. The person who must carry large sums of money, o is given to the wearing of jewelry, on guard whenever approached by strangers. If greater care were exerised in the handling of purses there would be fewer lost or stolen. It is always to be remembered that the artful dodger seldom goes through the pockets of another on chance. He is working to a fair certainty, spotting his victim and ascertaining by close observation whether the game is action, causing the exposure of a roll of usually one of the links in the chain of

Sir Thomas Lipton has found a way of getting rid of his surplus money that involves less criticism than founding colleges or contributing to campaign funds.

Umpires, Players and Spectators.

As now played professional base ball is a clean sport, honest to the core and rapidly losing the elements of rowdyism which for some years made it a synonym for thuggism and trickery. Managers and players have come to understand that the public supports the game because of the skill displayed, and not because of the disabling tactics employed on the field. Umpiring, too, has improved, until the arbitrator of the game stands high in the estimation of the spectators as an earnest worker in the interest of exact justice. No longer does suspicion mark him for a victim. He may be reviled by hot-tempered "fans" and hooted and styled "rotten" and dubbed with infinite variation of the theme. But in his heart of hearts the zealous supporter of the game knows that the umpire is square and is doing their interest just at that moment to take issue with the umpire. But it is the fortune of base ball that the umpire who is hooted today for a course of adverse decisions may be lauded tomorrow for another course of rulings, which happen more exactly to meet the partisan desires of the

Yesterday occurred at St. Louis a deplorable tragedy, bespeaking a revival of the old feeling of intense personal hostility toward the umpire, which it was hoped had faded. During an argument between an umpire and players over a decision of importance, a decision bearing upon a question of physical fact, a hotminded spectator in the stand threw a bottle, which struck the judge of play in the head, fracturing his skull and endangering his life. It is not too much to say that this eriminal action is repudiated by every friend of the game throughout the country. So indignant, indeed, were the other specshould not be addressed to any individual tators that when the bottle-thrower, real-Izing the seriousness of his conduct, tried to escape, he was pursued by a mob of frenzied people, who had to be driven back by the police.

It will be to the everlasting credit of the base ball public of the United States if that incident of the game at St. Louis roves to be the last time an umpire is asaulted. It should teach a lesson to every spectator. It should teach players that they are possibly inciting the riotous spirits of the crowd when they wrangle with the umpire over decisions which of course cannot possibly be reversed. For it is to be remembered that the participants are themselves to a large extent responsible for the opprobrium in which umpires are held by the spectators, and they can go far toward putting the game a feef in the sail of an organization which securely and definitely upon the basis of fair play and clean sport to which it has been steadily tending for years, "if they will play their parts with some degree of while I appreciate the generous concur-bence shown to me by the Commercial check upon their tempers and grant that the umpire is presumably honest in his Back of the blundering dispatcher or telegraph operator lies this broad fact-that it is unsafe to attempt to run trains in opposite directions on the same pair of rails. Yet although this truth is self-evident and has been tragically demonstrated scores and hundreds of times within the past few years, railways are continued in service with single tracks and reliance is placed in a signal system which, when it works perfectly, permits a shuffling of trains up and down by means of occasional switches without accident.

In this case the disaster was caused by the delivery to a freight conductor of or- the tallest skyscraper in New York." ders which warranted him in going one switch farther along the line than be cal person; "but as the skyscraper will would ordinarily have gone, in the face of never be fitted up with engines and shoved two approaching passenger trains. In and otherwise, making themselves con- either case there was no check on the blunder. When the freight train had pulled out of the Canaan station nothing could have prevented a collision short of the approaching engineers seeing the danger in time to bring their trains to a halt. The night was foggy, however, and furthermore a curve hid the trains from one another. Even on double-track roads the "human error" must always be reckoned with as a factor in railroad safety. But this element is greatly reduced as a potency for evil when there are two tracks and the block signal system is operated on an automatic basis. Even in such cases the danger is sufficient to warrant the demand that the railroads adopt some device which will bring trains to a halt when entering prohibited stretches of track, thus preventing rear-end collisions. The traveling public is desperately impatient with lines that decline to adopt every possible means of lowering the accident percentage. and it regards the double track as the first and most essential of these methods.

Oklahoma.

In one respect at least the people of Oklahoma are prepared for statehood. They vote tomorrow, and both sides are confident. You take your choice between a democratic prediction of thirty thousand majority, and the republican claim of ten among the Jamestown tourists who are thousand. This is in the style of the oldest states. Figures, it will be observed. are no respecters of commonwealths. They petty thievery, and it behooves all people will perform as big tricks for the new as for the old. Of all outsiders, the two men who probably await the result with most interest are Mr. Bryan and Secretary Taft. The one was the star stumper of the democrais and the other of the republicans. The latter, who is now at sea, must wait for his news until he reaches Honolulu. A republican victory would sweeten his trip across the Pacific considerably.

Disease Spread by Cuban Misrule.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer. A typical instance of Cuban misrule is furnished by the existing conditions at Cienfuegos. That there should have been an alarming outbreak of yellow fever at this place surprises no one who is acquainted with the facts, for Clenfuegos has the reputation of being the dirtiest and most insanitary city on the island, which is saying a good deal. It is dirty and insanitary in the superlative degree because the money that is appropriated for keeping it clean and sweet is not spent for those purposes, but is for the most part divided by the politicians among themselves. A good deal of cleaning can be done, a great many mosquitoes can be eliminated, a lot of sewerage can be constructed for $100,000 year, which was the amount provided for nose objects at Cienfuegos, four-fifths by the general government and one-fifth by the municipality, but only a small per-centage of this sum is applied to the work for which it is meant to pay.

From the New York Tribune. It was agreeable, as a matter of truth and justice, to observe in the Tribune a few days ago an account of the moral conditions which prevail in our isthmian canal zone, given by a well-known clergyman of the Episcopal Church who had gone thither on an official errand of inspection and investigation. After painstaking ob-servations he declared that moral condi-tions in the zone were remarkably good. There was very little crime, and little work for the isthmian police excepting to guard property. Imprisonments were chiefly for intoxication and brawling, but those mistwo or three places for the sale of intoxicants within its borders. Did you ever see a beaded bag looking like an exquisite painting? Very few of such bags are in existence, because of the skill, patience and time required in making them. From Vienna, Austria, come two dozen and three of these bags. One is before the writer-it's quite a large bag; some thousands of beads were utilized in producing the floral picture it represents. For beauty of form, color and shading this bag is a genuine work of art, fascinatingly attractive. It and twenty-six others have come many thousands of miles-each bag represents at least a month of hand labor, linked with marvelous skill. Witness this exquisitely delicate shading -all done in beads. How many link the artist eve, the able fingers and the infinite patience to produce such bags? So few that they are scarce, so scarce that the prevailing prices are $20 to $50 each! Think of purchasing at $2.49 and $9.98 and dot down another triumph for the Palais Royal.
